Europe's feathers - a monograph that discusses the subject of an extremely rare, and at the same time unique and fascinating. The author's author's work and unique comparative analysis, including photography, mean that even a person who is unrelated to matters or ecology with pleasure and interest flips through this position. Author Feathers of Europe's owls - product description: Marian Cie?lak - a forest educator, ecologist by vocation. A long-term employee of the Institute of Environmental Protection and the Ekofundusz Foundation. He is the author of many works in the field of nature protection, bird ecology and ecology of landscape, physiography and spatial planning. He has been researching feathers for years and publishes guides to their identification. He devoted the last decade to researching feathers and the relationship between ecologists and their plumage. These relations turned out to be very interesting and the results pointed to the existence of a new, fascinating method of studying bird ecology.
